July 13, 2025 — You will no longer be able to access specialized services for LGBTQ (Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, Queer) individuals through the 988 Suicide and Crisis Lifeline after July 16th. The action follows through on a promise made by the Trump Administration last month to “no longer silo LGB+ youth services” in order to make sure everyone gets the help they need. According to The Trevor Project, LGBTQ+ young people are more than four times as likely to attempt suicide as their peers. Because of that, U.S. Senator Tammy Baldwin says now is the wrong time to pull those specialized services, comparing it to military veterans who also need their own expert services through the Veterans Crisis Line at 988.
